

Ladies and gentlemen, today, on the occasion of the 74th Republic Day of India, I stand before you to pay my tribute and extend my warm greetings to each one of you.

The 26th of January holds a special significance in the history of our nation as it was on this day in 1950 that the Constitution of India came into effect, making India the largest democracy in the world.

The Constitution, which is the supreme law of our land, lays down the principles and guidelines that govern our nation and ensures the protection of the fundamental rights and freedoms of every citizen.

The past year has been an unprecedented one, with the world facing an unprecedented global health crisis in the form of COVID-19. The pandemic has affected every aspect of our lives and has brought to the fore the fragility of our existence. However, it has also shown us the resilience and determination of our people.

The way our healthcare workers, scientists, and researchers have worked tirelessly to combat the virus is truly commendable. The way our citizens have come together to support each other during these challenging times is a testament to the spirit of unity and fraternity that lies at the heart of our nation.

As we move forward, we must remember that our nation's progress and development are not just the responsibility of the government, but of every citizen. We must all strive to build a more inclusive and equitable society, where every person, regardless of their background, has the opportunity to fulfill their potential.

We must also remember that our nation's security and sovereignty are of paramount importance. We must remain vigilant and work together to protect our borders and ensure the safety and security of our citizens.

On this Republic Day, let us pledge to work towards building a stronger and more prosperous nation, where every citizen has equal opportunities and is able to live with dignity and respect. Let us also pledge to uphold the values and principles of our Constitution and work towards the betterment of our society.

I extend my best wishes to all of you on this special occasion and hope that the coming year brings peace, prosperity, and progress to our nation. Jai Hind!
